PROGRAM NOTE

In Gulistan, I bring together traditional songs from my Western and Middle Eastern heritages. The title comes from the thirteenth-century Persian poet Sa'di, whose monumental work Gulistan (“flower garden” in Persian) uses flowers as a metaphor for wisdom. Folk songs may be said to represent the collective wisdom of a culture, preserving generations of values and worldviews. Inspired by Sa'di, I chose folk songs that make reference to flowers, each with different metaphorical implications.

Part 1 combines the traditional Azerbaijani song “Sari Gelin” with the American folk song “Wildwood Flower.” The former describes a man helplessly longing for his distant lover, while the latter tells the story of a heartbroken woman whose lover has abandoned her. I intertwine the songs, suggesting a dialogue between two inconsolable lovers, each pining for the other.

Part 2 unites two metaphorical commentaries on the nature of love: the traditional Iranian song “Saye Chaman” and the English folk song “Seeds of Love.” I set the Iranian melody in an American folk style, and the English melody in a style evoking Iranian classical music. The melodies are often presented in counterpoint—a kind of musical metaphor for the mixture of cultures in my own life.

This work was written expressly for mezzo-soprano Fleur Barron, who shares in common with me a diverse heritage comprising Eastern and Western cultures.

1) Your blade has sliced my thumb*

I sowed the seeds of love
And I sowed them in the Spring.
I gathered them up in the morning so soon
While the small birds do sweetly sing.

My garden was planted well
With flowers everywhere,
But I had not the liberty to choose for myself
The flower that I loved so dear.

The gardener was standing by,
I asked him to choose for me.
He choosed for me the Violet, the Lily and the Pink,
But those I refused all three.

The Violet I did not like
Because it bloomed so soon.
The Lily and the Pink I did really overthink;
So I vowed I would wait till June.

In June there was a red rosebud
And that is the flower for me.
I oftentimes have plucked that red rosebud
Till I gained the willow tree.

The willow tree will twist
And the willow tree will twine.
I oftentimes have wished I were in that young man's arms
That once had this heart of mine.

1) I am drunk, I am drunk, I am drunk

Come all you false young men,
Do not leave me here to complain,
For the grass that has oftentimes been trampled
underfoot,
Give it time, it will rise again.

ANALYSIS

In Part 1, I changed the lyric “raven black hair” from “I’ll Twine ‘Mid The Ringlets” to “long flaxen hair” in order to suggest the blonde bride of “Sari Gelin.” Both melodies feature vocal embellishments inspired by their respective folk traditions.

In Part 2, the first 18 measures are inspired by clawhammer banjo playing and Carter Family guitar picking, in which the melody is played on the bass strings. The melody of “Saye Chaman” includes a koron, an Iranian microtone which is approximately a quarter-tone flat in relation to 12-tone equal temperament. The koron is approximated using quarter-tone accidentals. In mm. 150–167, the piano evokes the sound of a daf, an Iranian percussion instrument, using the piano’s highest register. The piano and clarinet melody in mm. 169–189 is inspired by Hossein Alizadeh’s 7/8 Chaharmezrabe Mahur.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

My sincerest thanks to my musical mentors, colleagues, and collaborators, all of whom were essential in the creation of this work: Fariborz Azizi, Fleur Barron, Valerie Coleman, Don Freund, Richard Pearson Thomas, and Li-Jie Yu. Special thanks to Cyrus Salimi, my mother Marjan Azimi, and my grandmother Parvaneh Monsef for their assistance with translation and pronunciation of the Azerbaijani and Persian texts.
